

Not The Same

I shield my eyes and turn my head
Cause these things take me back
To the days when I was
Not so concerned with what it is I see and do
But I'm not dead anymore, now I can think of You

I've always realized that I've been far away
From where You want me to be
And would love to see me
Embrace the consequence of all I cannot do
It makes me needy, sends me running back to You

I cause You so much pain
But You draw near anyway
Oh we are not the same

While my perennial failures bring me down
Your undying resolution to love me still abounds
Become the only thing to help me make it through Confirms the notion that I have nothing without You

I cause You so much pain
But You draw near anyway
Oh we are not the same

Written by Corey Nolen
Copyright Corey Nolen

www.etherealband.com